

1984 Sewickley Academy Yearbook

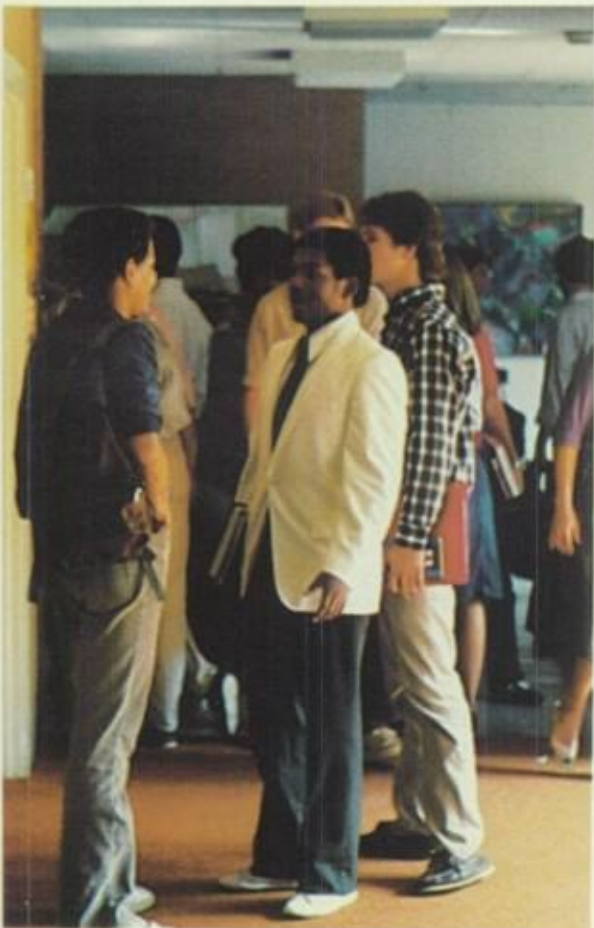

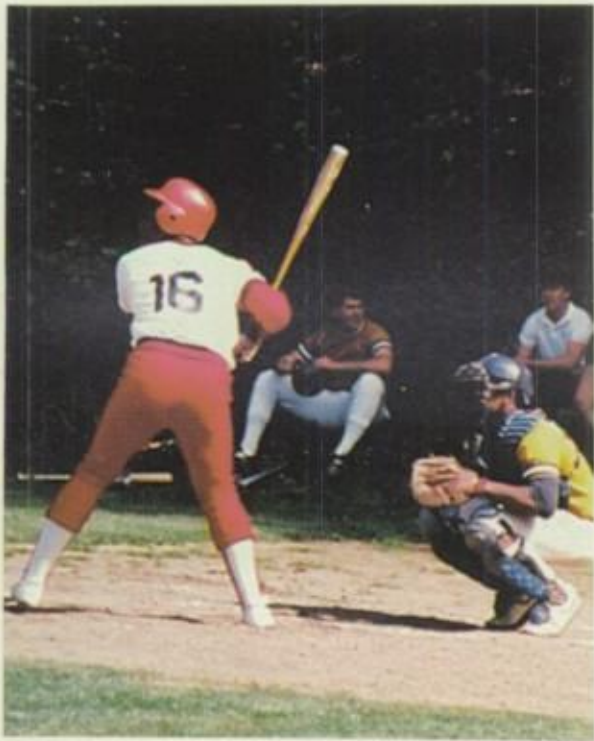

Volume XXVIII

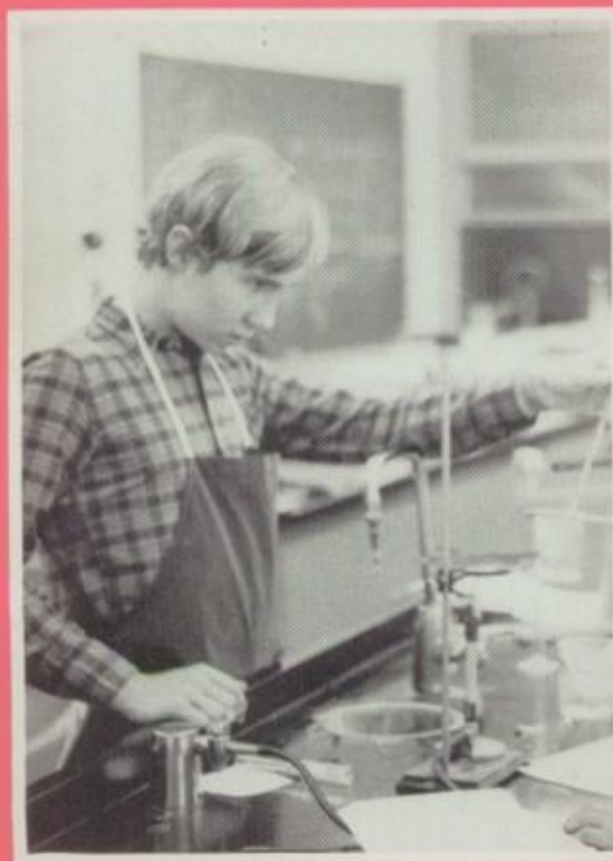

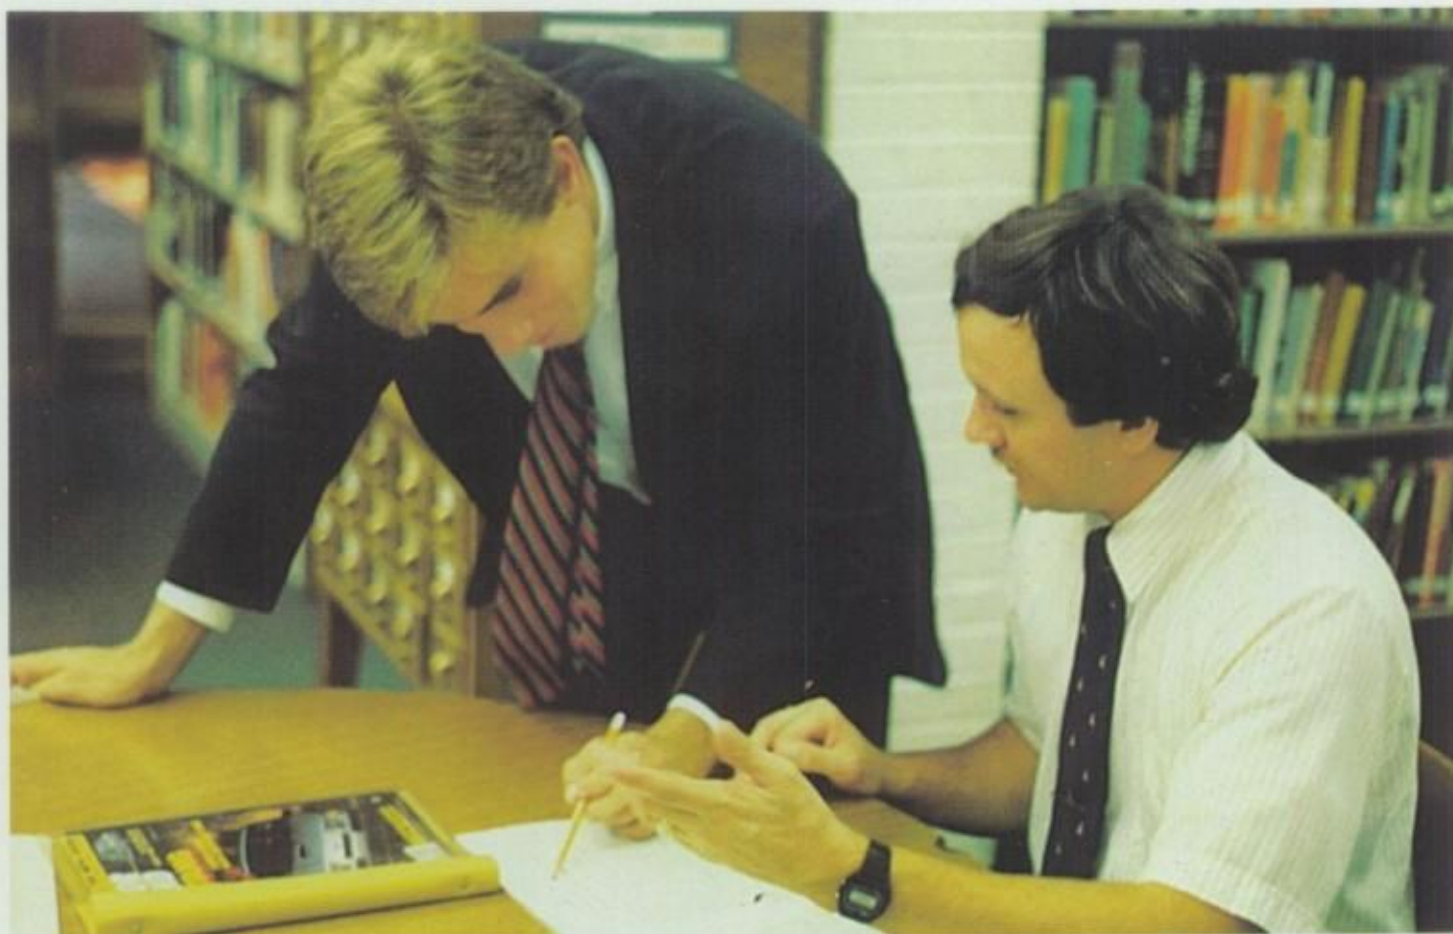

Reach for the Stars . . . Sewickley Academy has always been successful in achieving its goals. This year has been no exception. The restrictions on creativity and free thought as foreseen in George Orwell's "1984" were proven false. With knowledge and exuberance, the students of the Academy will keep the controlled society from future existence. This 1983-84 yearbook is a pictorial expression of the students and faculty of Sewickley Academy.

Dedication

We dedicate the 1984 Sewickley Academy yearbook to a woman who is truly appreciated in our school. The care she gives to her students is extra special. In addition to being a fine English teacher, she shows us many aspects of the society in which we live. Besides teaching us English in the classroom she encourages us to advance our knowledge through our own creativity. We are pleased to dedicate this yearbook to Mrs. Victoria Polinko.

The Leading Light

Dear Class of 1984,

I suppose it is unavoidable for you as a class graduating this year to be addressed without some mention of George Orwell's "1984." The more I have thought about this, however, the more I have realized that this may actually be fortuitous. "1984" provides an ideal way of emphasizing what you have accomplished because happily you are the antithesis of almost everything it portrays. Let me offer some examples.

In his appendix, "The Principle of Newspeak", George Orwell said, "Its (Newspeak) vocabulary differed from almost all other languages in that its vocabulary grew smaller instead of larger . . . each reduction was a gain, since the smaller the area of choice, the smaller the temptation to take thought." You, on the contrary, are distinguished by how many of you have a "vocabulary" that has not only grown; but has been used to "take thought" in a wonderful diversity of ways, enriching the lives of those of us fortunate to have shared your experience.

Consider another example. When Winston, the novel's protagonist, reads the book, the text of opposition, he finds this sentence: "In the long run, a hierarchical society was only possible on a basis of poverty and ignorance." As words, poverty and ignorance are more closely related in what they signify than sometimes we realize. To limit our aspirations, whether they involve our desire to know or to succeed, ultimately deprives us of our humanity. You, thank goodness, as a group of special human beings have demonstrated by your accomplishments how it is possible to have the freedom to be what one chooses and to enjoy the fruits of your efforts as individuals as a result.

Finally, there is that terrifying suggestion in "1984" of a society that is incapable of friendship, laughter, integrity, and the joy of living. Thanks to your enthusiasm, your caring, and your commitment you offer eloquent testimony to the fact that the kind of society Orwell portrayed does not and need not exist. Almost two hundred years ago Immanuel Kant wrote, "Two matters fill me with ever renewed wonders: the starry heaven above me and the moral law within me." I hope that you will retain that sense of wonder, whatever you will be doing once you leave Sewickley Academy. I am grateful for the privilege of having shared even if briefly in your time at Sewickley Academy. Good luck to you and thank you for all that you have given us.

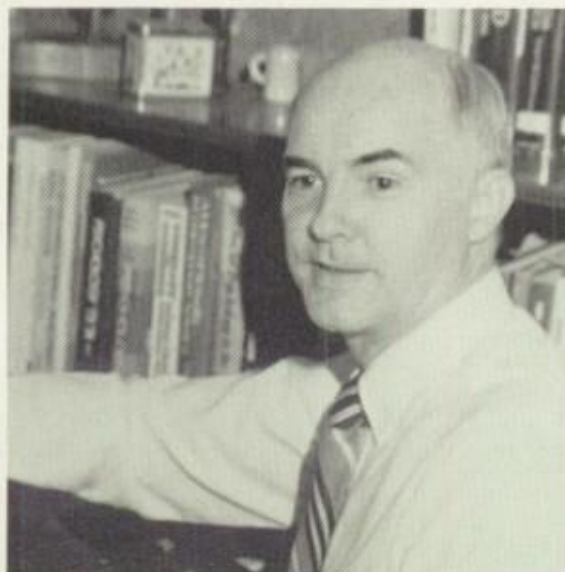

Sincerely,
Douglas O. McClure

The nursery schoolers enjoyed themselves while also broadening their horizons. Their favorite activities included alphabet and cooking their own snacks. The nursery school children especially liked the science field trips with Mrs. Mercer and a visit to the new children's Museum. All in all, their activities have well prepared them for Kindergarten.

This years second graders became more independent and are looking forward to an even more productive year in the third grade.

This year the ninth grade said one of their favorite activities was going to the Carnegie Art Museum where they saw various types of art. Another popular activity was Charles Dickens Day. In preparation for this, all ninth graders learned about his literature and the styles of that era. Although they enjoyed their final year in the Middle School, the ninth grade enthusiastically takes off into the Senior School.

Although the sophomore class had to take on the many new challenges in the Senior School this year, they managed very well and are excitingly awaiting the next years of Senior School.

Big Brother Is Watching You!

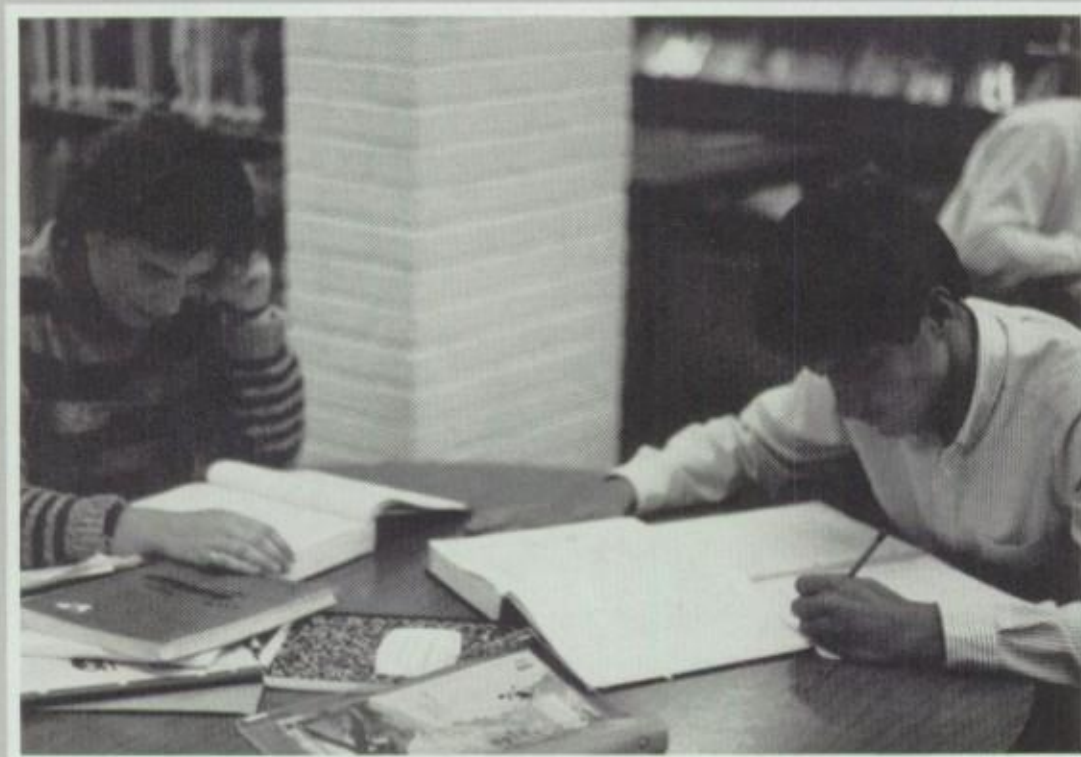

This year the junior class successfully sponsored a number of activities including leaf-raking, dances, selling geraniums, and candy cane sales. These activities both helped them to unify but also to raise funds for the long-awaited prom. Although their primary concern was for their academics, they never failed to recognize that they must willingly work together to accomplish the many goals that they set for themselves.

Katja Anna Elisabeth Wippermann joined the senior class in January, after finishing high school in Belo Horizonte, Brazil. Katja was born in Aachen, Germany and lived there and in Istanbul, Turkey until 1982, when she moved to Brazil. During her semester at the Academy, she studied English, French, mathematics, and United States History. She recieved a diploma with the rest of the class in June. She lived with the McLean family for the semester.

Seniors who have been here since nursery school: Rob Konrad, Stephen Gardner, Michael Dugan, James Carroll, Lisa Traupman.

The Guiding Light

The Senior School Council consisted of four members from each class and four faculty representatives. The Council focused on having students express their ideas through the six Council committees which undertook a number of projects in and around the school community.

The Discipline Committee, headed by Linda Pangersis, received the student handbook and gave advice as to how it could be improved. This committee also discussed the problem of litter as well as other discipline related issues concerning the Senior School.

The Community Affairs Committee, headed by Anne Hutchinson, undertook numerous projects dealing with the Sewickley community. In the first event of the year, members walked from Burger King to the D. T. Watson Home in order to raise money for that institution.

The Campus Improvement Committee was very active due to the enthusiasm of its chairperson, Nina Roth. The committee undertook the task of trying to beautify the Senior School while also making suggestions for its improvement.

The Curriculum Committee, headed by Sarah Buescher, once again held meetings to formulate recommendations for improvement of the Senior School curriculum. The recommendations were then given to the Council which in turn gave them to the Administration.

The Activities Committee, with chairperson Katie Zuberbuhler, sponsored numerous school events throughout the year. Among these events was the annual Bizzare and Extreme Day. The Activities Committee was by far the largest of the School Council committees.

The Assembly Committee, under the leadership of James Carroll, organized assemblies for the Senior School during the course of the year. The committee focused on channeling student's opinions into meaningful assemblies designed to inform the student body.

Keeping The Universe SAFER

SAFER (Sewickley Academy For Environmental Research) is a group of ecologically concerned students who perform various activities for the community. Over the past years, activities have included monitoring the Little Sewickley Creek and its tributaries, conducting research on the impoundments along the stream, and observing Earth Week by providing activities for the entire school to participate in. More importantly, SAFER promotes ecological concerns in Sewickley Academy and the community.

Blazing Paths To The Future

The Trailblazers' function is not just to under take outdoor activities for recreation - it is also to learn about our diminishing natural environment , its problems, and how we can avoid or alleviate these problems. Trailblazers offers its members a chance to do things that they may otherwise not get a chance to do, such as day hikes to interesting locations, weekend backpacking trips, cross country skiing, and things as important as studying acid rain problems or assisting at the local recycling project. But most important, every outing with the Trailblazers offers some new opportunity for learning and for personal growth, whether it be observing a naturalist band birds, studying acid rain in the Adirondacks or just experiencing the serenity of the outdoors.

Understanding Different Worlds

This year the French Club kept busy with a variety of interesting activities. Members participated in the traditional activities of decorating the school for Christmas and having their annual Christmas dinner. However, along with tradition came new "flavor". During the Foreign Language Festival in February, the club enjoyed viewing the talents of a visiting French cook. Also, in addition to its crêpe sales, the French Club experimented with the idea of a bake sale devoted solely to French cheeses and baked goods. The sale, along with other events occurring throughout the year, was a big success and a lot of fun.

Bringing The Boundries Closer Together

In the Spring of 1982, twenty Academy students spent three weeks in France. They attended classes at the lycee, visited various points of interest in the area around Paris, and of course, enjoyed the delicious French cuisine!

Soon after, the French students from Lycee Polyvalent de Melun Nord came to spend three weeks as part of our French Exchange Program. They were a very congenial group who quickly became a part of Academy life and we were sad to say "au revoir" so soon.

Last Fall, German students from Munich came to spend three weeks with Academy students as a part of our German Exchange Program. They had a very busy schedule which included tours of Pittsburgh's sights such as Mt. Washington, Phipps Conservatory, and the zoo. They also toured Mobay, Braun's Bakery, and KDKA studios. In addition, the exchange students took a four day trip to Washington D.C. which was exciting as well as educational.

This past Spring, our students went over to Germany and stayed in Munich with their families. They toured Germany, and of course, enjoyed the many pubs.

Shining With Success

Newspaper Wins Awards

Not just a bulletin board of school news, the Seventh Pillar was a forum for student expression. It attempted to connect the three schools and delve "behind" the news in in-depth focuses. Topics included the 20th Anniversary of the Senior School, advertising, a special "spoof" issue, and the year 1984 as compared to Orwell's book. Word processors played an important role in the production of the paper this year as all articles were typed on disks, where they were edited and printed as desired.

Rockets Of Creativity Soaring To The Stars

The Sewickley Academy Arts Magazine, Portfolio, is a collection of Senior School students' literary, artistic, and musical works. Because of the great amount of time invested in collecting, choosing, and editing various pieces, the staff published only one issue in May. The issue contained the best creative works among those submitted. Portfolio uncovered the unique talents of Senior School students. These talents might have otherwise been hidden from faculty, parents, and most of all the students themselves.

Our Skyrocketing Writers

This year, Pendragon was organized with the help of Mrs. Reteshka. The staff consisted of ten members, two of which were in room 101 after school each day of the week. The staff helped students with college essay questions, English assignments, and numerous other projects.

Rob Konrad

The Forensics Team is an important part of the extra-curricular programs at Sewickley Academy, and the only one exclusively related to speech activities. The team had one of its most successful years in the four year history of Forensics here at the Academy. The team members were very successful and brought home many trophies from the tournaments they attended, but most important, they had fun doing it.

Communicating Celestial Messages

Concerned Students for Political Awareness was founded to enlighten students about the political situations of our nation and our world. C.S.P.A. meets on Sunday evenings to discuss controversial issues. These informal meetings provide an important, relaxed atmosphere which foster intellectual discussions. Topics have included the situation in Grenada and Lebanon, cults, conformity versus individualism, and the nuclear arms issue.

Black History Month Spreads Culture Through Artistic Expression

Jazz pianist Walt Harper

National Black History month was celebrated at the Academy during the entire month of February through a series of entertaining, cultural and educational events.

A gala wine and cheese opening reception was held in Campbell Art Gallery to honor ten black artists whose works were shown during the month. The artists' media included paintings, sculpture, prints and fiber art. Dr. Ralph Hill, father of senior Jerry Hill, played the harpsichord at this reception.

Dr. Frances Barnes, well known local poet, spoke to the Middle School on the subject of Black Women Writers. She traced black women's writing from Phyllis Wheatley through her own.

The Sounds of Heritage, a professional group of black singers led by Dr. Ralph Hill, performed the history of blacks through spirituals for the black cultural enrichment of grades four through twelve.

Storyteller Tamujean Ekunfeo, who has appeared with the Imaginariumm Three Rivers Arts Festival, and the Children's Museum, performed for students in Nursery school through twelve. He wove fascinating tales in a highly entertaining way.

Walt Harper and All That Jazz performed a History of Jazz for Academy families and friends. This event brought to a smashing close the month-long celebration.

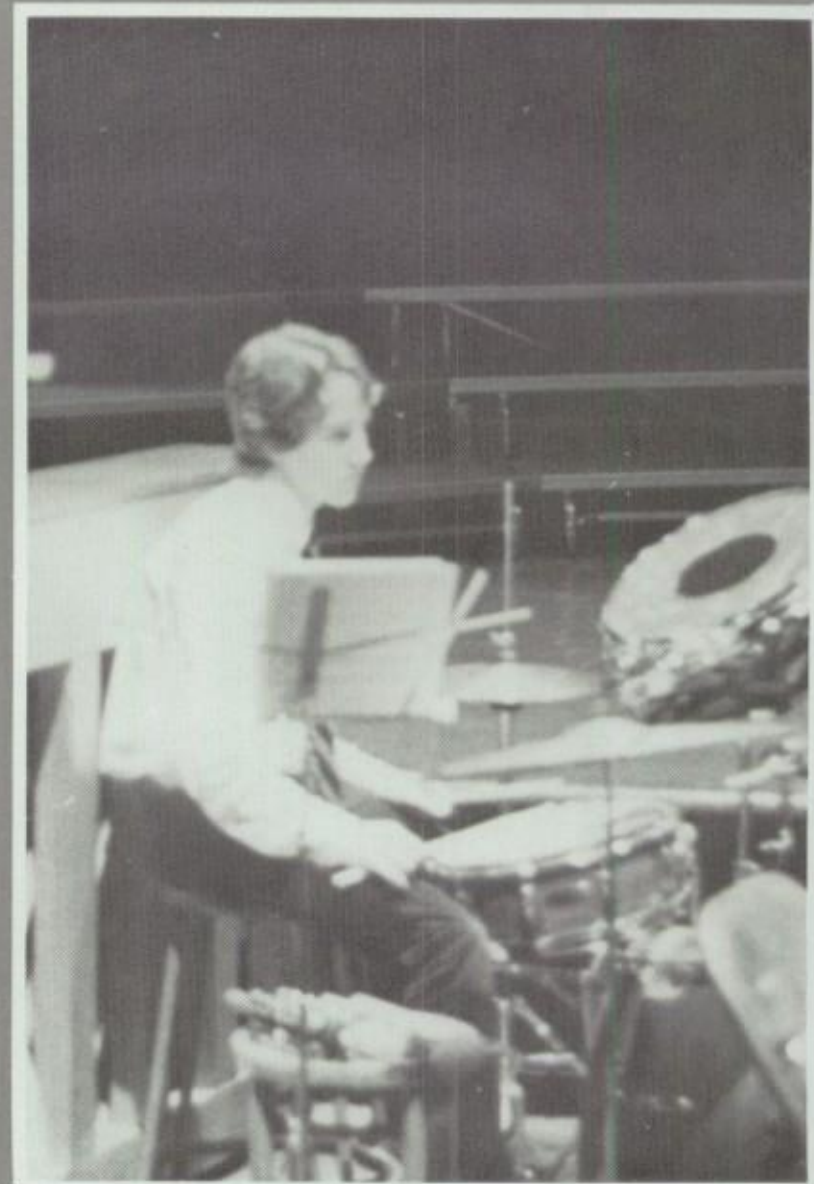

Coordinators of the month were Campbell Art Gallery Chairman Ann Clement and Lower School faculty member Joan James.

Heavenly Voices

The Senior School Chorus and Chamber Singers have participated in many exciting activities in the past year outside the school environment. At Christmas time, a small group was hired on three different occasions to sing at private parties and a larger group was asked to carol in Sewickley. The Chorus worked diligently in preparation for their annual trip, this year taken to Baltimore. Mr. Fritz's knowledge of music and sheer determination proved to pay off with a successful chorus as the outcome.

Starlets Discovered In 'Dark' And In 'Midsummer'

In addition to many other productions performed this year, the Senior School presented "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs," which was a sensitive drama that depicted the lives of the Flood family. They also presented "A Midsummer Night's Dream," a frolicking fantastic comedy about love. It was a very successful year and we're sad that Mr. Brinda has decided to leave.

Future Stars Make 'Alice' Glow

This year the Lower School put on Alice In Wonderland. In this version, Alice stumbles into an enchanted musical wonderland. The white rabbit, caterpillar, Mad Hatter, Cheser Cat, and the evil Queen of Hearts were all there singing as well as dancing. Some songs included were "Put on a Happy Face" and "Little Boys."

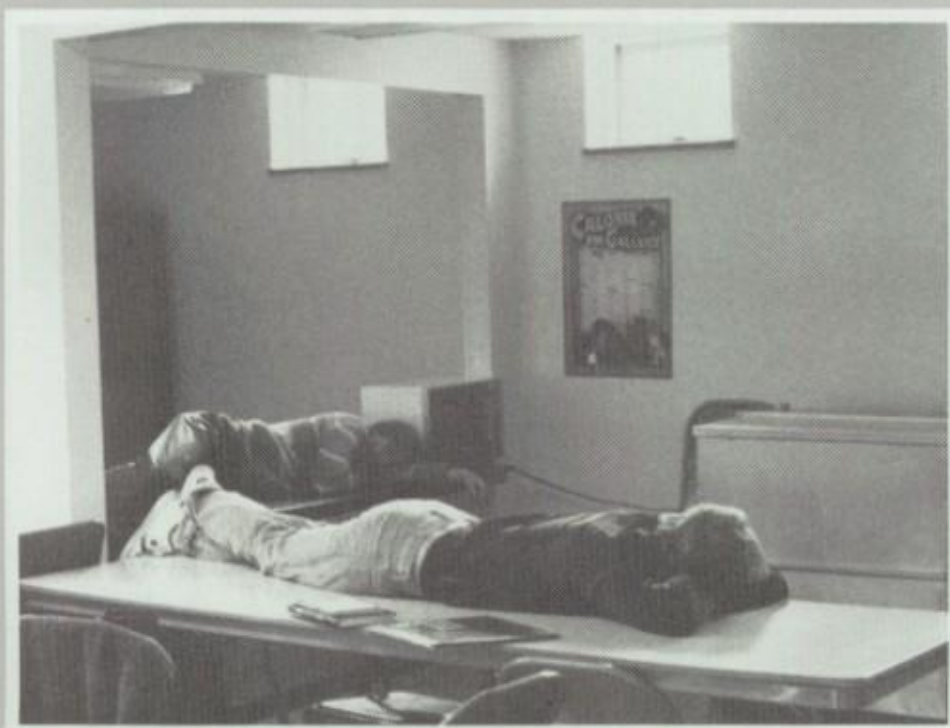

Above And Beyond Everyday

Included in this year's Middle School activities were the annual Latin Banquet with its singing and dancing, and the musical "Dames at Sea" which was fun and entertaining. All in all, the year was exciting.

ATHLETICS

The image is a full-page graphic design. The background is a dark, black sky filled with numerous small, white, out-of-focus stars of varying sizes. Several larger, more prominent stars with distinct four-pointed diffraction patterns are scattered across the upper half of the image. In the lower half, the word "ATHLETICS" is repeated in a bold, white, sans-serif font. The words are arranged in two symmetrical, upward-pointing triangular columns that meet at a central point. The top of the triangle is formed by a single word, and each subsequent row below it contains one more word, creating a dense, textured effect. The overall composition is balanced and visually striking due to the contrast between the white text and stars against the black background.

Class Of 84

Dear Trevor,
This year has been pretty good
I guess. I am glad we've become good friends even after what I did to you. I am so sorry I about that. I hope I see you at the A.C.C. pool sometime over the summer that would be fun.
We should play golf together
sometime there is only one problem
I suck. Well, I don't know what else to write.
Luv ya

Flashback: 1984

Then came Grenada, a former island paradise in the Carribean. U.S. troops triumphantly stormed ashore and prevented the tiny island nation from becoming a Soviet controlled base. But the valor of our servicemen met harsh criticism from even our staunchest European allies, and the sweeping victory was soon nearly forgotten. The American people seemed to be at a crossroads. The nation could not decide whether to try and forget about the appalling tragedies and disappointments of the day, or to actually try and become involved in the issues that led to them.

The Republican's answer was the former one as their choice for 1984 was again Reagan. Our President attempted to tell us that the world was a super

One night in late August, we watched as network programming was interrupted. Instead of hearing David Letterman telling jokes and interviewing guests, we heard the sullen tones of network news anchormen. Slowly we learned that the Soviet Air Force had dispatched two fighter planes to intercept a commercial airliner that had strayed into Soviet Air Space. Although the Soviets denied that the plane had been shot down, it was soon established that 270 innocent civilians had been murdered and sent to a watery grave in the Pacific.

Again, on October 23, we were horrified by a mass killing as a terrorist attack on marine headquarters outside of Beirut, Lebanon left 240 soldiers buried dead under tons of concrete and steel. Even more devastating to us was the fact that these men had been stationed to keep peace and not to make war. As the situation in Central America also continued to worsen, most of America seemed sick and disgusted with our nation's inability to properly diagnose political situations.

place, that we sleep better now than we could four years ago. The dissension in the Democratic Party, on the other hand, represented the disparate views of those Americans who wanted to change things. Eight very different Democratic candidates sought to win their party's nomination.

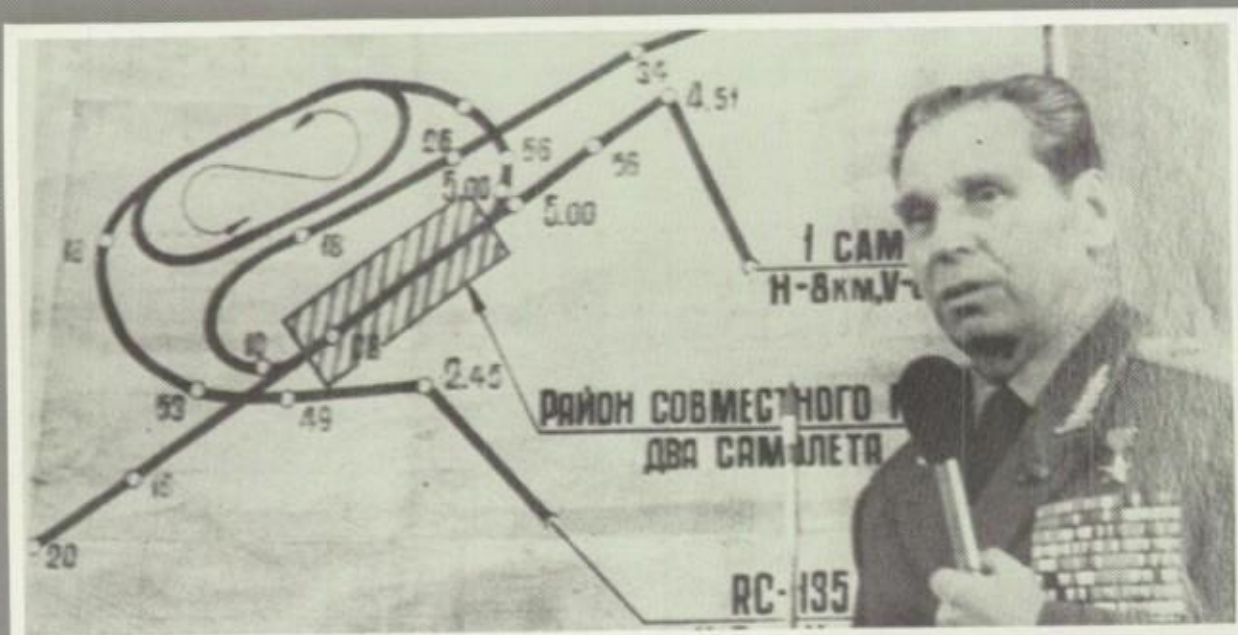

In the midst of all this, Americans tested their knowledge of trivia to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars for the inventors of the game Trivial Pursuit, which is likely to become the biggest selling board game ever. And just at a time when Parker Brothers thought they had a monopoly on that.

The stock market continued to soar until around February, when its slow decline indicated that the economy's recovery had tapped out. Unemployment and interest rates were down and the value of the dollar was up, making for a very healthy economy. GM, Chrysler, and Ford all turned enormous profits, something these companies had not done in this decade. But, somewhere in the background loomed the almost 1.5 trillion dollar deficit. Although it has yet to affect the economy, many suspect that it was behind the gradual decline of the stock market.

February also saw the death of Yuri Andropov, under whose leadership the Soviet Union became even more involved in the arms race and Cold War. The Soviet Union walked out of peace talks in Geneva, failing to even attempt to prevent the proliferation of nuclear arms.

The past months were also fraught with tear producing moments as we learned the story of Baby Jane Doe. And, on February twenty-third David, better known as the "bubble boy", died after doctors tried to inject a few ounces of his sister's bone marrow into him to cause his body to create defenses and immunities to disease. The attempt was ultimately unsuccessful, but after twelve years of confinement, he was able to leave his bubble-like enviorment and experience the kiss of his mother and the hug of his father.

In the world of sports, the fourteenth Winter Olympics provided the sheer elegance of British Ice Dancers Torvill and Dean, and the brute strength of the Soviet hockey team. Yet the real American marvel was the ski team, which captured five medals, as Phil Mahre, Debbie Armstrong, and Bill Johnson all proved that, for one day at least, they were the best in the world.

Or was it Sarah "I wanted to be Activities Editor!" Buescher?

Was it Mary "I swear she is after my job!" McLean?

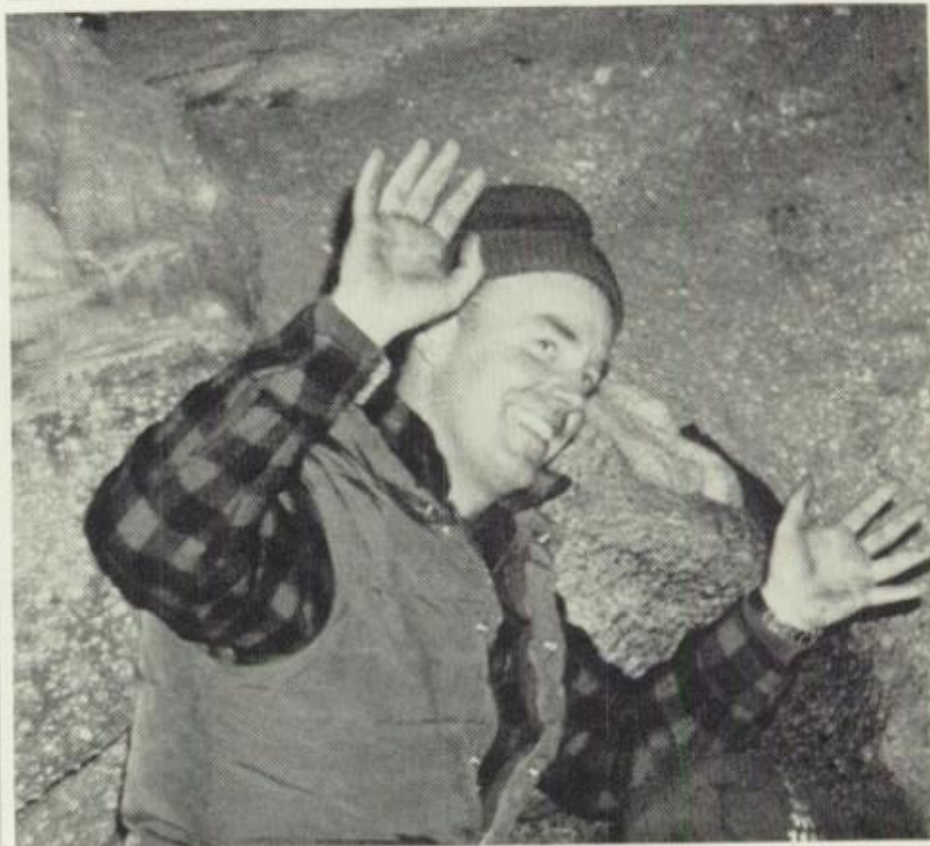

Or was it Susan "She always uses the best cropper!" Gray? (A possible weapon?)

Or was it Valerie "If she reminds me about those pictures one more time, I'll . . ." Gaydos?

Or was it Mr. "I always hated her schedules anyway!" Magoo?

Did she contract some rare disease in the jungle?

Did the fumes from painting the Yearbook room last summer finally catch up with her?

We May Never Know

The stars in the world around us, as in our school, are not always on the lacrosse field or on the stage. They are also the students, teachers, and friends whose limitless dedication keeps the Academy going. The stars are the managers of the teams who stay long after the players and spectators go home, the college advisors who write favorable recommendations until six o'clock, all the mothers who sewed costumes for 'Alice in Wonderland', and the parent or teacher who chaperoned one more dance. It is the teacher who takes the extra five minutes to talk to a student about a personal interest and the coach who helps one player to perfect his or her form. Seen from afar, these people are not outstanding, but it is their dedication that makes the Academy shine.
